NEW QUESTION: 1

An architect is designing a machine blueprint containing web, application and database servers utilizing NSX-T for networking. Upon provisioning, network traffic must be automatically restricted to allow the web server to communicate only with the application server, the application server to communicate with both the web and database servers, and the database server to be blocked from communicating with the other servers.

Which methods can be used to accomplish this?

- A. Specify an appropriate NSX-T Existing Network and Security (NS) Group in the blueprint and assign it to each machine.
- B. Assign an appropriate security group to the entitled items or entitled service with the entitlement.
- C. Create or update an appropriate security group within NSX-T to include the provisioned machines.
