NEW QUESTION: 3

An EMC NetWorker customer has been using an EMC Disk Library (EDL) for over four years. The EDL has reached its capacity limits. The customer is in the process of virtualizing as many physical servers as possible to reclaim data center floor space. They are backing up numerous 8 TB databases. The customer is interested in replacing the EDL and is concerned about the amount of backup traffic over the network. The replacement must maintain a single point of backup administration and reduce backup times for their growing virtualized environment.

What is the recommended solution?

- A. Add an Avamar server for VMware backups and use NetWorker with DD Boost to back up the physical servers and large databases to a Data Domain
- B. Add a deduplication storage node to NetWorker for VMware backups and replace the EDL with Data Domain for large databases
- C. Add a deduplication storage node to NetWorker for database backups and replace the EDL with Data Domain for VMware and physical servers
- D. Replace the EDL with Data Domain using DD Boost

Answer: C
